PREFACE.

THE present catalogue is the outcome of a resolution adopted at its annual meeting in 1885 by the Society of the Alumni. A short time previously at a reunion of the Class of 1862 the attempt had been made to provide brief notes of the careers of its members, and it was thought that similar notes of all who had ever attended the Departments of Arts and of Science in the University of Pennsylvania would be interesting and useful.

It was almost immediately recognized that a book of this kind would require so much labor in its preparation as to justify going a little farther than was at first contemplated and obtaining additional data which would be valuable to anyone desiring to prepare a complete biography of any matriculate of the College. The determination to perform the task in this way transformed the work from a mere catalogue with occasional notes as to date of death, etc., into a collection of short biographical sketches.

The Committee did not consider itself absolved from its obligation toward the Alumni Society and the University by the failure of those addressed to respond to its inquiries, and has sought information from all sources, though not always with success. It must be remembered that the problem with which the Committee has had to deal is one of a biographical catalogue commencing in Colonial days, relating to an institution situated in the centre of the scene of the war of Independence, and therefore deprived of many of the archives which at a less distracted locality or in a more peaceful era would have been obtainable.

With a view to obtaining necessary information of the persons designated without invading their rights to privacy, a carefully considered question-sheet was sent out by the Committee to all matriculates or their representatives. Editing the material collected has not been easy. Believing it necessary to limit itself to the bare statement of facts, without elaboration of any kind, the Committee feels that injustice seems to be done to some eminent matriculates who were neither authors nor holders of public office, and whose records therefore appear meagre. This could not be remedied without the preparation of much fuller biographies than space and means would permit. Other difficulties were supplying deficiencies in cases where the returned question-sheet omitted items proper for insertion, and the excision of matter, in cases where the returns were too full.

During the time which has elapsed since information concerning certain matriculates was secured, events which should be noted have occurred. The Committee has tried to obtain and insert all such additional information. That received too late for embodiment in the text will be found in the table of Additions and Corrections.

The book is intended to include every matriculate in those courses now embraced in the College of the University of Pennsylvania, but the Committee has not included the Department of Chemistry Applied to the Arts, of which the matriculates will be found in the annual catalogues from 1854 to 1860. No degrees were conferred, and this course was never incorporated with the College courses. The Department of Music was not incorporated with the College courses until 1884, but all the students in that department have been included. The Department of Biology, until 1889, was independent, affiliated with the Medical Department. From that date this course became one of the College courses, and those who pursued it have been included in this catalogue.

The University began the publication of annual catalogues in 1829. Prior to that date, while the lists of graduates may be regarded as accurate, the lists of matriculates have been made up with great difficulty, from minute-books, reports, etc., and are very incomplete.

In accordance with the will of the majority of the Committee, the work has been arranged by classes: that is to say, the name of a matriculate is put down with others under the year when his class graduated. Though pains were taken to secure accuracy in classification, some errors have doubtless been made, particularly in recent years, when the organization of the College, with its numerous courses of varying length, has grown very complex. Some anomalies will be found where a matriculate was a member of more than one class: others where a degree was conferred on a matriculate subsequently to the date of graduation of his class.

In a work of this character, covering a period of more than one hundred and forty years, and embracing sketches of about five thousand men and women, doubtless many errors will be found. It is earnestly hoped that matriculates or others able to correct such errors or supply omissions will communicate with the Historiographer of the Alumni Society of the College Department, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

ORGANIZATION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The "Constitutions of the Publick Academy in the City of Philadelphia" was signed by the Trustees elected by the contributors, November 13, 1749.

The institution was incorporated by the Proprietaries, July 13, 1753, as "The Academy and Charitable School in the Province of Pennsylvania." An additional charter was granted June 16, 1755, changing the title to "The College, Academy and Charitable School of Philadelphia, in the Province of Pennsylvania."

The first commencement was held May 17, 1757, in the College Hall.

The Medical Department was organized May 3, 1765, and the first degrees were conferred, June 21, 1768, at a special commencement, the graduates in Arts not taking their degrees until December.

The charters were abrogated by an act of Assembly, passed September 27, 1779, which at the same time created a new institution, under the title of "The University of the State of Pennsylvania," and vested in it the property of the College.

The College was revived by an act of Assembly, passed March 6, 1789, repealing so much of the act of 1779 as deprived the College of its charter and property.

The institutions maintained separate existences until November, 1791, when, in pursuance of an act of Assembly, passed on the thirtieth of September of that year, they were united as "The University of Pennsylvania."

Until 1850 the University was composed of the Department of Arts and the Medical Department; in that year the Law Department was organized.*

In 1851 the Department of Chemistry applied to the Arts was added. This was changed, in 1855, to the Department of Mines, Arts, and Manufactures, and again, in 1863, to the College of Agriculture, Mines, Arts, and Mechanic Arts. In 1872 the name was once more changed to the Department of Science, and this, in 1875, became the Towne Scientific School.

A Department of Fine Arts, established in 1861, was abolished in 1869.

The Auxiliary Faculty of Medicine, changed subsequently to the Auxiliary Department of Medicine, was established in 1865.

The Department of Music was added in 1877, and the Department of Dentistry in 1878.

* A Professorship of Law had been created in 1790, and filled by the appointment of James Wilson, of the Supreme Court of the United States. Though their brilliant opening gave promise of success of the attempt to introduce in America the scientific study of law, Judge Wilson's lectures were not continued after the first year.

The Wharton School of Finance and Economy was added in 1881, and the Departments of Philosophy, of Veterinary Medicine, of Biology and of Physical Culture were added respectively in 1882, 1883, and 1884.

The Museum of Archæology and Palæontology was established in 1889, and the Laboratory of Hygiene, the Graduate Department for Women and the Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology in 1893.

The College Department was further developed by Courses in Architecture, in American History, and special two and four year Courses in Arts, in Chemistry, in Chemical Engineering, in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering and in Civil Engineering which were established in 1892 and 1893.

The University now comprises the following departments :

ABBREVIATIONS, REFERENCES, Etc.

adm., admitted; b., born; d., died; dau., daughter; m., married; s., son; Philo., Philomathean Society of the University of Pennsylvania; Zelo., Zelosophic Society of the University of Pennsylvania. Abbreviations have been used wherever possible. With the exception of the above no explanation of them is deemed necessary.

The names of matriculates known to be deceased are preceded by a †.

Prior to 1873, the degree conferred at graduation was A. B., except in the few cases in which B. S. is noted. Beginning with that class, the degree conferred at graduation is indicated in all cases. The degree of A. M., unless a date is given, was invariably conferred three years after graduation.

When a degree, honorary or taken in course, is followed by a date without the name of any college, it has been conferred by the University of Pennsylvania. Trustee, Provost, Vice-Provost, Librarian, Chaplain, Professor, Assistant Professor, Lecturer, Instructor and Tutor not being followed by the name of any college, indicate positions held in the University of Pennsylvania.
